YABer Yak:

National Youth Advisory Board Member Nigel Cox ~ Farmville High School

I am retiring as Chair from the Youth Advisory Board. The past four years as a YABer have helped me grow more than I could have imagined, and I say THANK YOU SAVE!! As summer break approaches and we have more free time to be on our computers, the monthly focus of Internet Safety should be a top priority. SAVE encourages students To be safe and recommends that personal information not be given out at all. You shouldn't chat with strangers because who you're talking to may not be who you think they are. Whatever you do just make sure you're using the internet in a safe way. For more information on Internet Safety, visit National SAVE's website: <http://www.nationalsave.org>

Techno Tidbit

FamilySafe is an application that stores important information about your family.

If a family member goes missing, this information, as well as an up-to-date picture, can be emailed to family, friends, law enforcement, etc., to help locate the family member. To make sure pictures are recent, FamilySafe will remind you every month to retake pictures with your phone.

Check out this link: <http://www.androidfreeware.net/download-familySAFE.html>

Monthly Focus: Internet Safety

SAVE encourages students to be extremely careful when using the internet. Messages posted in any kind of a public forum can be read by anyone. Personal information such as name, address (home and email), telephone number, school name, or information on family and friends should never be shared with anyone you meet in cyberspace. Never reveal anything about other people that could possibly get them into trouble. It is important to remember that people you meet online, whether in a chat room or message forum, may not be who they say they are. Also, be careful not to put any personal details, including locations, on your instant messenger "away" message. The approaching end of the traditional school year calendar is a good time to spread awareness in your school about internet safety.

THE POWER OF THE INTERNET

By Giacomo Rivituso, Ed.D., State University of New York*

The Internet has certainly changed the way people of all ages work, learn, socialize, and play. Our seemingly constant need for information can quickly and easily be satisfied by accessing the Internet with a few simple mouse clicks and keyboarding strokes. Similarly, our desire to connect with existing friends, or to meet new ones, through social networking sites can be done with ease from just about anywhere as a result of the power of the Internet.

However, the Internet also contains a dark and sinister side where online predators lurk seeking to befriend innocent and unsuspecting people, especially young people. Shielded by the anonymity of the Internet, the online predator methodically establishes a virtual or online friendship with the potential victim through chat rooms, email, instant messaging, video, and text messages, forging a relationship of trust between the two individuals. Once trust is established, online predators begin their criminal deeds by cyber stalking, cyber harassing, and cyber bullying their victims. In many instances, the cyber abuse continues relentlessly, often leading victims to feel anxiety, depression, loneliness, embarrassment, isolation, fear, and the feeling that they are somehow responsible for the abuse against them. In extreme cases, the abuse leads some victims to thoughts of suicide or to the actual act itself because they feel alone and helpless in stopping the abuse.

Cyber bullying, or electronic bullying, is a relatively new phenomenon resulting from the power of the Internet and the wide scale ownership and use of technological and communications devices such as cell phones, email, blogs, and chat rooms. Cyber bullying takes place among people of all ages, gender, race, and religious beliefs, however it happens most frequently among adolescent victims in middle and high schools. Other distinguishing facts about cyber bullying include the following:

- Both males and females are victims of cyber bullying
- The cyber bullying instances are repeated or occur more than once
- The cyber bully holds a position of dominance or power over the victim
- Some victims actually become cyber bullies themselves in response to their victimization
- Among adolescents, friends tend to cyber bully friends, in part because they find such actions funny
- Anonymity, or not knowing who the cyber bully is, empowers the cyber bully because they do not think they can or will get caught
- Victims of cyber bullying often feel that they have no where to go to escape the abuse of the cyber bully
- Victims often feel that they did something to cause the abuse
- Victims of cyber bullying suffer their abuse in silence afraid to tell their parents, school officials, or the police of their abuse due to embarrassment or fear of losing computer or cell phone privileges.

It is important for people, especially young people and adolescents, to know that there are things you can do if you become a victim of cyber bullying. Above all else, know that you did nothing to cause the abuse and that you are NOT alone in dealing with it. Here are some additional things you can do:

- Tell your parents, or an adult you trust, what is happening to you. We sometimes are hesitant to mention uncomfortable things to our parents or adults we trust for fear they may not understand our situation or that they may react dramatically in order to protect us. For example, some adolescent victims of cyber bullying do not tell their parents that they are being cyber bullied for fear that their parents will take away their cell phone and/or computer privileges as a way of protecting them from the cyber bully. Nonetheless, talk with your parents, or a trusted adult, openly and honestly about what is happening and how it makes you feel
- If your abuse is taking place in school, let your teacher, school resource officer, and/or the principal know of your abuse. They can help, but you have to make them aware that you are being abused
- Do not respond to the cyber bully. By responding you are actually reinforcing or strengthening the cyber bully in his or her position of dominance over you
- Do not delete the messages or texts you receive from the cyber bully. These messages should be kept and shown to your parents or an adult you trust. If your parents decide to get the police involved, these saved messages will help the police in recommending a suitable course of action to deal with the cyber bully

The Internet is a powerful and engaging tool that can be used for many purposes by many types of people. Remember, you can harness and control the power of the Internet by using it wisely and by being safe when using it.

*Giacomo 'Jack' Rivituso has 18 years of law enforcement experience and more than 20 years of experience working as an IT professional. Jack's dissertation research explored the lived experiences and psychological impact of cyberbullying victims using interpretive phenomenological analysis. Research interests include cyber crimes and cyber abuse among various demographics of people.
