

Jackson named Social Work of Year

The North Carolina School Social Workers Association has selected Carol Jackson as its 2015 Southeast Region School Social Worker of the Year, according to information from Onslow County Schools.

Posted Oct. 26, 2015 at 10:31 AM
Updated Oct 26, 2015 at 10:32 AM

The North Carolina School Social Workers Association has selected Carol Jackson as its 2015 Southeast Region School Social Worker of the Year, according to information from Onslow County Schools.

Jackson was chosen for her support and dedication to the students, families and staff she serves, including White Oak High School, Hunters Creek Middle School and Hunters Creek Elementary.

This is not the first times Jackson has received an important award. She was recognized as the 2013-14 SAVE (Students Against Violence Everywhere) Advisor of the Year for her outstanding efforts in preventing violence in schools. Under her direction, SAVE has made a tremendous impact on its members at each school and each year her three chapters have grown. Through SAVE involvement students improve their leadership skills as well as reduce bullying through more student.

She recently received notice all three of her SAVE chapters received $1,000 Allstate Foundation Grants – it was noted she received grants for all three clubs because the middle and high school members mentor their younger chapter members.