Students from White Oak High School's Students Against Violence Everywhere (SAVE) chapter are joining youth from around the country at the national SAVE Summit March 21.

The youth-led conference is held annually to train attendees in effective ways to reduce violence in their communities. Students, teachers, law enforcement officials, counselors and other partners will be in attendance at the event, which will include workshops, speakers and activities involving violence prevention, according to the news release.

The summit leads into National Youth Violence Prevention Week March 23 to 27. SAVE is a partner in the week-long educational movement.
