

Looking Good donates to SAVE

Looking Good donates to SAVE

Submitted photoSAVE members wearing their new bow ties.

VALDOSTA – The Valdosta High School's chapter of the Students Against Violence Everywhere (SAVE) program recently received a donation of bow ties from Looking Good, an area local business.

Prem Sadarangani, the owner of the Looking Good clothing store in the downtown Valdosta area partnered with VHS by providing bow ties for the SAVE program. One of the goals of the program focuses on teaching young men how to dress for success. When Sadarangani was approached to support the program, he immediately and wanted to help by providing bowties.

"Looking Good is a beacon in our community and has kept the Valdosta Area and surrounding communities "looking good" for many years. Valdosta High School and the SAVE program is very thankful for support of Mr. Sadarangani and the countless supporters that have reached out to support the program this year," said Valdosta City Schools in a news release.

For more information about the National SAVE organization please visit the website at <http://www.nationalsave.org/> or contact Mr. Ken Moody, assistant principal at Valdosta High School to learn how to support the program.